

Thomas Massie Blasts DOJ Over Redacted and Missing Epstein Records

Massie: “Nothing’s gonna change with Todd Blanche in charge.”

Rep. Thomas Massie said Tuesday that key Jeffrey Epstein documents are still being withheld by the Trump administration and he doesn’t expect anything to change with Todd Blanche in charge.

He also revealed that materials shown to members of Congress during visits to the Justice Department are being presented in redacted form, meaning lawmakers are not seeing the full, unfiltered records.

Massie argued this raises serious concerns about transparency and whether the department is complying with federal disclosure requirements tied to the Epstein Files Transparency Act.

Massie also emphasized that large portions of the record remain unreleased altogether, pointing to multiple categories of documents, including FBI "302 forms" tied to survivor interviews, that have yet to be produced. The Republican lawmaker criticized the Justice Department, now led on an acting basis by Todd Blanche following Pam Bondi's departure, for continuing to invoke privileges he says do not apply under the Epstein Files Transparency Act.

According to Massie, the combination of redactions and missing files amounts to an ongoing failure to fully disclose the Epstein record. Meanwhile, Trump is working to primary Thomas Massie during Kentucky's primary in May.
