

Jeffrey Epstein and Saint-Tropez: The sex predator's other hunting ground in France

From: Tancredi Marchiolo
Sent: Saturday, June 11, 2011
To: jeevacation@gmail.com
Subject: St Tropez 15th July
Attachments: EMAIL INVITE.JFIF

Importance: High

15th july goga ashkenazi's 'Ladies party' in st tropez want to come? I'm going with beth (the ny model) and one of her girlfriends. Going to be full of girls.

ciao

From: PrivatePA [REDACTED]
To: Tancredi Marchiolo
Sent: Mon Jun 13 19:24:42 2011
Subject: GOGA and MARIANNA - E-Invite Friday, 15th July 2011- PLEASE CONFIRM YOUR Attendance

From: "Mark Fisher" <[REDACTED]>
To: "jeevacation@gmail.com" <jeevacation@gmail.com>
Subject: I had a dream about you in St Tropez
Date: Thu, 13 May 2010 14:36:08 +0000
Priority: Normal

US JUSTICE DEPARTMENT/LE MONDE

The businessman spent nearly every summer in the seasonal South of France hotspot for the fashion and luxury industries. Just as in Paris, where he owned an apartment, this town – frequented by celebrities, billionaires and aspiring models – served as a base for his sexual crimes.

Jeffrey Epstein's Parisian lives

The Epstein case: Thirty years of judicial negligence, to the detriment of victims

Most French presidential candidates are vacationing. Not Gabriel Attal

The lessons from the blaze that defied French firefighters for 18 days

Political scientist Carlos Echeverria Jesus: 'The Ceuta crisis reflects Morocco's territorial ambitions'

After 72,000 migrants from the Moroccan city of Fnideq reached the Spanish enclave of Ceuta on July 30 and 31, the director of the Ceuta and Melilla Observatory analyzes the state of relations between Morocco and its Spanish neighbor in an interview with Le Monde.

Iran: 'The surge in executions exposes the regime's extreme fragility, not renewed confidence'

Despite the Iranian regime's relentless crackdown against civilians, the country's society continues to pursue its path to freedom, writes Farid Vahid, co-director of the North Africa and Middle East Observatory at the Jean Jaurès Foundation.

With the Golden Owl's new guru, doubts grew: 'Becker made mistakes, but that doesn't justify the awful things people said'

Michel Becker, the game's new master, fell into the same pitfalls as his predecessor. But the end of the treasure hunt was near.

IN MAPS
Romain Imbach

Where can you see the August 12 solar eclipse? Find out with our maps

What will you see depending on your location? Use Le Monde's simulator before you put on your protective glasses, so you can watch the Sun as it is covered by the Moon on Wednesday, August 12.

Newsletter

M INTERNATIONAL

Sign up to get the best of M le Magazine du Monde twice a month, straight to your inbox

Sign-up for free

US Senate confirms Trump loyalist Todd Blanche as attorney general

Helmets and reflective gear become mandatory for Paris e-scooter users

Russian interference becomes campaign issue for French presidential candidates

France heatwave expected to intensify in coming days

Bulgaria summons Ukrainian ambassador over crashed drone

Spain starts border checks on Italy after migrant row

Gucci's magical carousel in February 2020

Ukraine's Zelensky visits Russian ally Serbia as Moscow pounds Kyiv

Iran's network of allies reorganizes around Iraq and Yemen, after setbacks in Syria and Lebanon

Algeria's arrests of alleged drug lords signal cautious thaw between Paris and Algiers

Tour de France Femmes: Demi Vollering seizes yellow jersey on penultimate day

Hungary's ruling party selects Orban-critic judge as pick for president

Editor’s Picks

EXPLAINER

Dorian Jullien

France's Night of the Stars 2026: Everything to know about the stargazing event

This weekend, nearly 500 stargazing gatherings are set to take place across France. This year's theme is the Sun, which will experience a partial eclipse over mainland France and Saint-Pierre-et-Miquelon, caused by the Moon, on August 12.

4 min read

FEATURE

Gilles Rof

In Marseille's streets, the 'unprecedented acceleration' of crack cocaine

Residents, elected officials and harm reduction groups, united in a collective, are calling for resources that match the surge in drug use on the streets of France's second-largest city.

6 min read

SERIES

Valentin Pérez

Alexander McQueen and Isabella Blow: Fashion, friendship and tragedy

'Sewn and torn' (1/6). Love stories and friendships can sometimes end badly, even in the world of fashion. In the mid-1990s, an almost symbiotic relationship developed between the London-born designer from a working-class background and the broke aristocratic fashion journalist. That bond shattered when McQueen left for Givenchy, marking the end of their closeness – something neither ever truly recovered from.

4 min read

Opinion

EDITORIAL

SpaceX, a dream put to the test of the numbers

Le Monde

EDITORIAL

Ahead of US midterms, Democrats face a test of unity

Le Monde

OP-ED

Raffaele Simone, philosopher: 'Unlike Paris, Rome is losing its greenery and becoming a scorching expanse of travertine'

Raffaele Simone
Philosopher

Most read

Jeffrey Epstein and Saint-Tropez: The sex predator's other hunting ground in France

As judge halts White House ballroom work, Trump vows to take case to Supreme Court

Most French presidential candidates are vacationing. Not Gabriel Attal

Milton Keynes, north of London, pioneers grocery delivery by small robots

Helmets and reflective gear become mandatory for Paris e-scooter users

Africa on the front line of Trump's toughened US migration policy

Bulgaria summons Ukrainian ambassador over crashed drone

US Senate confirms Trump loyalist Todd Blanche as attorney general

SpaceX, a dream put to the test of the numbers
